COMING SOON!

STANFORD
DEVICE
IDENTIFICATION

You will soon see the window below show up on your computer. This pop-up is part of Stanford's efforts to protect its data and network and leads you to a short survey. Please take the two minutes to answer just a few questions about how you use your computer for University business. You will only be asked to fill in the information once for each machine on which the pop-up appears.

Stanford Device Identification

Stanford University

As part of our ongoing effort to protect Stanford data and networks, the Stanford Information Security Office requests information on your use of this computer for University Business.

Time to complete: approx. 2 minutes.

Come Back Later		Proceed Now

Clicking to come back will defer the form for two hours.

ver. 3.0.0.0

Thank you for your help in securing Stanford's data and network!
(For help completing the survey, see reverse side of this flier.)

Please use the below standards to help answer the questions presented by the Stanford Device Information survey.

Are you the primary user (or the party responsible for the data security) of this computer?

Yes	If you are the person who uses this machine more than anyone else, make decisions about what applications are on it or would generally consider it "your" computer.
No	If this machine is in a computer lab or a general use machine.

Do other people use this computer?

Yes	If other people use this machine by logging in via another user name or use it using the same login as you for more than a few minutes a day.
No	If others only use it occasionally and do not have their own login.

Is this a Stanford purchased computer?

Yes	If this machine was paid for by your school, department, program, supervisor, PI, grant or other Stanford funds.
Yes	If this machine was paid for by you, using your personal funds and reimbursed by Stanford
No	If this machine was paid for by you, using your personal funds and not reimbursed by Stanford

Is this computer used for Stanford-related work, including even minimal use of email, voicemail, or Stanford files?

Yes	If you work with any data related to Stanford, not including personal data such as your pay statements, or personal benefits information.
No	If you do not do any work for Stanford on this machine or only have personal data from Stanford such as pay statements and personal benefits information.