

Rental Housing Programs Eligibility Criteria

Housing Programs Overview

Stanford University's housing programs (Programs) are available to assist its faculty and staff with housing purchases and housing rentals. The Programs include:

1. Rental Housing Programs comprised of residential rental leases for Faculty Residences (on-campus) and Stanford University Residences (on- & off-campus); and
2. Housing Purchase Programs comprised of residential ground leases, housing allowances, and mortgage loans.

Only an Eligible Person may participate in the Programs. An Eligible Person is defined as a person who meets the applicable Programs eligibility criteria. Eligibility for these two programs is not identical. Please see the eligibility criteria for each program. Eligible Person's may benefit from one program at a time. Additionally, an Eligible Person who has defaulted on any Program will be ineligible for any subsequent Programs. What is described here is the eligibility criteria for rental housing programs. The eligibility for housing purchase programs is described in the Housing Purchase Programs Eligibility Criteria.

Information regarding all of the Programs is available by visiting the Faculty Staff Housing website (fsh.stanford.edu), by email (fshousing@stanford.edu), by phone (650-725-6893) or by appointment at our office addressed above.

RENTAL PROGRAMS

The Rental Housing Programs are comprised of apartments, condominiums, rooms, and single family homes. Stanford University Residences include properties both on-campus and off-campus in the surrounding community, that are managed by third party vendors. Faculty Residences include properties on-campus subject to a residential ground lease and lessees should refer to their residential ground lease for specific sublease requirements to ensure compliance. Examples of non-compliance may include sub-leasing to individuals who are ineligible, or use of their residence for business purposes such as short term rental, subject to transient occupancy tax.

RENTAL ELIGIBILITY

The Rental Housing Programs participants may include anyone identified in the Eligible Person Summary By Program Area table presented on the following page. Eligibility is grouped in order of priority (1 to 4), as established by Faculty Staff Housing (FSH).

The Eligible Person must occupy and maintain the Premises as his or her own principal place of residence. At any time during the Term, upon request of the Manager, the Resident shall provide the Manager with satisfactory evidence (as reasonably determined by the Manager), that the Eligible Person occupies the Premises as his or her own principal place of residence.

It is the responsibility of the Eligible Person to notify FSH if his/her eligibility changes, even temporarily. This notice is to be provided to FSH in writing before the Eligible Person's change in employment status occurs. Examples of changes in employment status which could affect Program eligibility can be changes to employment percentage, position or classification. Any financial assistance received after the employment status has changed must be repaid.

For additional rental housing information please visit the Rental Resources section of the Faculty Staff Housing website (fsh.stanford.edu/rentals/index/shtm).
