

How to get started?

A CIGH networking event for undergraduates interested in global health research and advocacy

Wednesday, Jan. 13, 2016 | 4:30 - 6:00 pm
Clark Center S-360 (enter through Peet's Coffee)
 light refreshments provided **

Join us for two panel discussions featuring leaders from Stanford and the nonprofit community who will share insights on how to get involved in global health - as a volunteer, researcher or in your future career path. Each panel will be followed by a Q&A.

Advocacy & Volunteer Opportunities

- Emily Alsentzer, Stanford undergraduate, PIH Engage
- Gabriel Garcia, MD, William and Dorothy Kaye University Fellow in Undergraduate Education & Professor of Medicine
- Brian Rawson, Senior Advisor of Community Organizing at Oxfam
- Lauren Wedekind, Stanford undergraduate, Stanford CDDRL
- Suzanne Gaulocher, PhD, MPH, Director of Community Engaged Learning at the Haas Center

Getting Started in Research & Careers

- Michele Barry, MD, FACP, Senior Associate Dean for Global Health and CIGH Director
- Steve Luby, MD, Professor of Medicine and CIGH Research Director
- Gary Darmstadt, MD, Associate Dean for Child and Maternal Health and Professor of Pediatrics
- Nathan Lo, Stanford MD student, END7
- Tiffany Kung, Stanford MD student, Organization for Global Health

RSVP is encouraged, but not required: <http://bit.ly/1Qy4ABP>

Stanford | Center for Innovation in GLOBAL HEALTH

To learn more about CIGH, visit our website at globalhealth.stanford.edu.