

THE GRADUATE PROGRAM IN ANTHROPOLOGY

Stanford University | 2015-2016
(for matriculation beginning 2016-2017)

Graduate training in Anthropology at Stanford University is designed for students who seek the Doctoral (PhD) degree, and for students who seek the Masters (MA) degree, only. Entering graduate students need not have majored in anthropology as undergraduates, although many have backgrounds in behavioral, biological, environmental, and social sciences. Students may choose from the following Department tracks: 1) Archaeology; 2) Culture and Society; 3) Ecology and Environment.

GRADUATE MA DEGREE PROGRAM

Anthropology admits a limited number of students to pursue the terminal MA degree. Preference is given to applicants who have special training, skills, or experience in various field. Students should be able to complete the MA program in 3 to 5 quarters. Transfer units to the MA are not permitted. Anthropology MA applicants whose ultimate goal is the Anthropology PhD degree program should apply directly to the PhD degree program. Transferring from the MA degree program to the PhD degree program is not permitted.

The deadline for graduate applications to the MA degree program is 08 December 2015. Prospective applicants should reference the department web site for information about application for graduate admission. Successful applicants for the MA program may enter in the following Autumn Quarter. Only Terminal MA Applicants must file a report of their Graduate Record Examination score, electronically, by way of the Educational Testing Service. Application procedures for both the terminal and coterminal degree programs can be found at <https://www.stanford.edu/dept/anthropology/cgi-bin/web/?q=node/11>.

MA degree requirements include the following:

- Enrollment over a minimum of 3 quarters with a minimum of 45 quarter units in Anthropology curriculum (beyond the undergraduate level), with a minimum GPA of 3.0;
- 45 units, constituting the University minimum for the MA degree, must be at or above the 100-level;
- 23 of the 45 units must be at or above the 200-level (course work designated primarily for graduate students);
- Enrollment in a Research Methods course and in a Theory course with a grade of 'B', or higher;
- Enrollment in a minimum of 4 Anthropology graduate-level review courses from a chosen track: Archaeology, Culture and Society, Ecology and Environment.

Although, the MA degree program usually requires more than one full year of study, students entering the MA degree program from an appropriate background are usually able to complete the MA degree in one calendar year.

GRADUATE PhD DEGREE PROGRAM

Prospective graduate PhD applicants should submit their applications on line by reading the information located at <http://gradadmissions.stanford.edu>. The electronic application fee is $125.00 and is paid by credit card.

The deadline for graduate application to the PhD degree program is 08 December 2015 9:00 PM Pacific Standard Time. Application procedures for the PhD degree program can be found at <https://www.stanford.edu/dept/anthropology/cgi-bin/web/?q=node/11>. Successful applicants for the Ph.D. program may enter in Autumn Quarter, only. It is the department policy not to defer graduate admission.

Degree requirements for the PhD include successful enrollment and participation in the department's review courses, 2 qualifying exams (one for topic and one for area), and an oral exam defending the dissertation. Students are encouraged to plan for the completion of all work for the PhD within 5 years. Anthropology PhD students must take a minimum of 135 quarter units with a minimum GPA of 3.0. The maximum allowable number of transfer units is 45. For more information, please go to the department web site at: <https://anthropology.stanford.edu>.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT

No Financial support is available for students in the MA degree programs. For PhD students without external funding, the Department endeavors to provide needed financial support through a combination of fellowship, teaching and research assistantships and affiliateships, and tuition grants to all students admitted to the PhD degree program who maintain satisfactory degree progress.

Graduate funding is usually provided for 5 consecutive years. In addition, summer stipends may be given to support summer field research; and, the cost of university health insurance coverage is usually provided for autumn, winter and spring, and summer quarters in years 1 through 5. Funding eligibility includes the following: First-year students who have not entered the PhD with outside funding are required to make at least 1 outside funding application for pre-dissertation training and improvement funding by the end of autumn quarter. Second year students are encouraged to make at least two funding applications for summer field language or area studies. Third-year students who have not secured funding for the Fourth year are required to make at least 3 outside funding applications for dissertation improvement and research by the end of autumn quarter. Fifth year students who have not secured funding for the sixth year and above are encouraged to make at least 2 funding applications for dissertation write-up by the end of spring quarter.

ADMISSIONS

Admission to the graduate programs in Anthropology is granted for matriculation beginning in autumn quarter 2016-2017. PhD and MA applications must be submitted by 08 December 2015 for consideration of admission in the following autumn quarter. ## THE DEPARTMENT

Anthropology is devoted to the study of human beings and human societies as they exist across time and space. It is distinct from other social sciences in that it gives central attention to the full time span of human history, and to the full range of human societies and cultures, including those located in historically marginalized parts of the world. It is therefore especially attuned to questions of social, cultural, and biological diversity, to issues of power, identity, and inequality, and to the understanding of dynamic processes of social, historical, ecological, and biological change over time. Education in anthropology provides excellent preparation for living in a multicultural and globally-interconnected world, and helps to equip students for careers in fields including law, medicine, business, public service, research, and ecological sustainability and resource management.

Archaeology in Anthropology builds on the research interests of the Archaeology faculty appointed in the Department of Anthropology as well as of faculty associated with the Archaeology Center. Faculty research areas may include historical periods ranging from early humans and contemporary studies of material culture.
