Full Speed Ahead

Junior Daphne Patterson is one of the top offensive players in the conference, with 62 goals in her first two years on The Farm.

In 2006, the Cardinal lacrosse team became the first team from west of the Mississippi to compete in the NCAA tournament.

After a landmark 2006 season, the Stanford women's lacrosse team is ready to pick up where it left off and defend its name as the lacrosse powerhouse of the west. The Cardinal made history last year, using a second-straight Mountain Pacific Sports Federation (MPSF) title to propel itself into the NCAA Tournament and become the first team from west of the Mississippi to break into the field.

The Cardinal is not done making history, however, and is ready to take its success one step further in 2007. Since taking over in 2001, Head Coach Michele Uhlfelder has led the program to historical milestones after historical milestones. In 2001, her team of virtual unknowns cracked the top-20. In 2003, the team finished the season with a program-best 14 wins and a No. 15 national ranking. The following year, the team bested the mark with an appearance at No. 14. In 2006, the team beat a top-10 opponent, produced the first west coast All-Americans and made the NCAA Tournament. In 2007, Uhlfelder and her squad are eyeing a deeper run in the tournament and a chance to become the first west coast team to take home an NCAA title. With 20 returning letter winners and 11 talented freshmen, Stanford is prepared to contend with the best programs in the nation.

"We reached a milestone last year, and our program knows how fun and rewarding it is to go to the NCAA tournament," says Uhlfelder. "But last year is last year, and each year is unique. That experience is part of who we are, and part of our tradition now, but it takes a mentally tough group to put that experience in your back pocket and focus on the things that got you there. For all that will be said and written in polls and predictions, it comes down to a team's ability to reinvent themselves, integrate new talent, and develop the skills and experience of the veterans to compete among the nation's best. I think we have the discipline to not look back, and we have the excitement over new challenges and a new level of play. Our goal has always been to start where we finish, so we're focusing on starting at the level we finished last year and playing with those high expectations."

Uhlfelder, who enters her seventh season at the helm of the Cardinal, is excited about her team's potential to excel this season. Stanford has posted an impressive 72-36 (.667) mark under the Baltimore, Md. native and has dominated the MPSF, with a 43-2 (.956) record against conference opponents. Uhlfelder and her staff have set out clear guidelines for continuing the program's success this season.

"We're looking for a high level of consistency no matter the opponent," she says. "It's important that home or away, early or late, we're playing the best game that we can possibly play. We want to start out strong, take advantage of early opportunities and be a team that never looks back. Getting better everyday is hard, but we're focused on building on each experience and each game."

Stanford is led by four senior captains who provide strong guidance for the Cardinal, on and off the field: Liz Piselli, Rachel Dyke, Bryanne Gilkinson and Michelle DeChant. The foursome brings a wealth of experience, competitiveness and leadership to the squad, and will help build confidence in a young group.

"Our captains have a lot of experience between them and complement each other really well," says Uhlfelder. "It's a team approach. Where some may be very vocal leaders, others are leaders by example. They've been around the program a long time and have seen it change and improve exponentially. During their time, they have kept their eyes wide open and have gained a lot of maturity on and off the field. There is no denying the spark that these captains give. They will be in a number of competitive situations in which I'll have confidence in their insights, organization, and competitiveness."

Additionally, the team returns a standout junior class, which will step into a more prominent leadership role as upperclassmen this season, offering valuable experience, dedication and skills.

"The junior class in general has been a big spark to our competitiveness," says Uhlfelder. "They love a challenge and will always bring their heart and soul to a game."

For 2007, Uhlfelder has challenged her team with one of its toughest schedules, aiming to once again turn the heads of the NCAA selection committee with a top-notch strength of schedule. Stanford's challenging lineup is nothing new, however. Of the team's six losses in 2006, four were to Final Four teams, including two to the eventual National Champion. This year, the Cardinal will face six 2006 NCAA Tournament participants, including Duke (Feb. 18), Notre Dame (Feb. 24), James Madison (Mar. 9), Maryland (Mar. 28), Cornell (Apr. 15) and Boston University (Apr. 29). Additionally, the squad will face six conference champions and five squads that finished 2006 ranked in the top-10.

"The intent is always to have the toughest schedule possible," says Uhlfelder. "We stand to gain the most from our wins, and learn the most from our losses. Our team realizes that we have some great competitors on our schedule this season, and we're excited for it. Facing good competition and preparing for good competition is a good measure of where we are and where we need to go. Our schedule will give us many opportunities across the country to bring out the best in us."

The Cardinal will face 10 non-conference opponents in 2007, and has a chance to earn the program's first-ever wins against six of them. James Madison and Maryland, Uhlfelder's alma mater, are first on the Cardinal agenda and the squad will see Virginia Tech and Boston University for just the second time in program history.

"We have some new opponents on the schedule which is always exciting," says Uhlfelder. "We also have an influx of some exciting ACC teams and other teams that have proven to be very tough. Hopefully, those teams are names that loyal fans and newcomers in the area recognize. It's excellent for the growth of the game that many of those match-ups are at home."

The Cardinal non-conference schedule is highlighted by a pair of matches in late February, when Stanford is slated to take on two NCAA Semifinalists in less than a week. The Cardinal will host Duke in the team's home-opener at Maloney Field on Feb. 18 before heading to Notre Dame for a Feb. 24 re-match of last year's double-overtime thriller with the Irish. Uhlfelder and her team are excited for both rivalry match-ups.

"In scheduling, we always think about having good rivalries," she says. "On top of adding to the quality of our schedule, it's certainly fun to have a longstanding rivalry with schools that are academically and athletically similar to Stanford."

In March, the Cardinal will host Connecticut (Mar. 4), James Madison (Mar. 9) and Colgate (Mar. 11) in non-conference action at Maloney Field. The team then meets Virginia Tech (Mar. 25), Maryland (Mar. 28) and Vanderbilt (Mar. 31) on a Spring Break road swing to close out the month. On April 15, the Cardinal will try to oust Cornell for the second-straight year. Two weeks later, the squad will complete the regular-season at Boston University (Apr. 29).

In MPSF action, the Cardinal wastes no time jumping into competition, as the team opens the season with two conference games in mid-February. The MPSF will present many new challenges for the Cardinal this season, as Stanford will vie for a third-straight title with five up-and-coming programs looking to break onto the national scene. Denver posted its best season in history last year. Cal has put together a prominent recruiting class, while Oregon is rapidly improving in only its third season as a varsity program. Saint Mary's has a promising new coaching staff, and UC Davis has dramatically improved its strength of schedule and recruiting efforts.

"I think the conference is in great shape," says Uhlfelder. "We are on the right track. Each year, the teams in our conference schedule tougher and tougher opponents. At the end of the day, that makes us all better. Our league, overall, has experienced tremendous growth and we have national talent, experience, coaching, and recruiting. We've established a reputation and are putting ourselves on the line against the toughest teams in the country."

Stanford will open the season with Oregon (Feb. 10) and Saint Mary's (Feb. 16). The Cardinal will see the rest of the MPSF schools in April, facing Denver (Apr. 6), California (Apr. 21) and UC Davis (Apr. 24). The MPSF Tournament will be held at Aggie Field in Davis this year, May 4-6.

Here's a look at the 2007 Cardinal by position:

The Goalkeeper

Stanford returns one of the best collegiate goalkeepers in the nation in junior Laura Shane. Last year, the Cardinal netminder finished the season with one of the top three save percentages in the nation (.556) and stood as the only Division I keeper to register multiple 20+ save performances. Her 22 saves against North Carolina on April 2 tied for the top mark in the NCAA in 2006 and, as just a sophomore, she was one of 21 players and three goalkeepers named as nominees for the Tewaaratron Trophy. The Baltimore, Md. native finished her sophomore season with 205 saves, the second-highest single-season mark in Cardinal history and moved within 50 saves of a Cardinal career save record. In May, Shane and teammate Megan Burkler shared the honor of becoming the first Stanford All-Americans, and the first All-Americans to represent the west coast.

"As a player, having a goalkeeper that you have confidence in allows you to take some chances," says Uhlfelder. "As a defender, you actually want your opponents to take some shots. Instead of being a defensive defender, you're allowed to be a more complete defender and our players are really excited about that. A solid goalkeeper gives us the opportunity to be a fantastic unit and feel like a fantastic unit. Laura's abilities have definitely helped us have that sense of belief."

This summer, Shane added to her honors by earning a spot on the U.S. Elite Team. Having just completed her sophomore season, she was the youngest player on the roster and one of only five current collegiate players. In 2007, the Cardinal defense will benefit from Shane's stalwart presence in the cage, and her experience facing some of the nation's top offensive players.

"Shane's U.S. team experience has increased her confidence and really helped her develop as a player," says Uhlfelder. "She's a great competitor, but she's also performed really consistently. Other players model that consistency, which is really important for the team. Day to day, you need players that you hold in high esteem and can pattern yourself after in some way, shape or form. Shane also makes our players better and better shooters each and every day."

Defenders

The Stanford back line is anchored by junior Bri Ned, who was one of the top defenders in the conference last season, earning both All-MPSF and MPSF All-Tournament Team honors. As a sophomore, Ned started all 18 games and led the Cardinal defense in caused turnovers. As a junior this season, she will bring experience and consistency to the Cardinal defense.

"Bri Ned knows the game really well," says Uhlfelder. "She's a student of the game and I think that makes her someone that her teammates really look to and trust. She's a great competitor and shows up for every game."

Senior Bryanne Gilkinson will also be a key player on defense for the Cardinal in 2007. Last season, she came off of injury and expanded her skill set to make a significant contribution on the Stanford attacking end. She finished the season with four goals and three assists, while tallying 15 ground balls, 10 caused turnovers and 12 draw controls.

"The significant minutes that Bry saw on the attacking end last year have given her a better appreciation for the game and make her an even smarter defender," said Uhlfelder.

Senior Rachel Dyke will also be looked upon as a leader on the defensive end this year, but, with the loss of starting defenders Thea Lorentzen, Kinsey Morrison and Nyerr Parham, the Cardinal will need a group of young returners to step up as well.

"I think our defense is fairly unproven," says Uhlfelder. "They are an extremely coachable group and all on the verge of being able to make a difference. A lot of our young defenders from last year have had the opportunity in the off season to step up and therefore are starting in a much more experienced place than they otherwise would have. Each has made a commitment to improving her individual defense. The unit is working hard to gain chemistry and learn how to limit our opponent's scoring threats and momentum runs."

Juniors Ariana Parasco and Katharine Fox, who both made significant contributions for the Cardinal last season, will look to take on even bigger roles this year. In addition, junior Alicia Soto and sophomores Polly Brown and Melissa Vogel song will vie for time on defense for the Cardinal.

"Our goal is to be fairly interchangeable," says Uhlfelder. "No matter who's on the defensive end, we want to preserve our toughness. We're very much a team defense, but I think this year's players bring a better understanding of the game and better individual skills. Top to bottom, we have more depth than we've ever had."

Midfielders

Veteran Liz Piselli will lead a young Stanford midfield in 2006, as the senior returns for her third year in the starting lineup. Last season, Piselli was the team's fourth-leading scorer with 28 goals and 41 points. She was second on the team with 13 assists and brings valuable scoring experience to the Cardinal lineup. One of three returning All-Conference honorees, Piselli will be a primary leader for the squad this season.

"Piselli is a really hard worker," says Uhlfelder. "She has the team's respect for that and has been instrumental in developing our team's work ethic, expectations, and chemistry. On the field, she's a power player, and uses her speed to gut things out. Using these tools is a great example to set for a really young midfield."

In addition to Piselli, returners Maris Perlman and Jamie Nesbitt will be vital to the Stanford midfield in 2007, having seen significant time on the field during last year's campaign. Sophomore Bess Siegfried will also return for the Cardinal after redshirting the 2006 season due to injury.

A significant portion of this year's Stanford midfield, however, will be comprised of well-credentialed newcomers, who, as a class, boast five First Team All-America honors, six Honorable Mention All-America honors and nine Academic All-America honors. The strong freshman class, which includes seven midfielders, will have the opportunity to make an immediate impact for the Cardinal.

"Our midfield this year is going to be a combination of new talent and returners who are stepping up and expanding their games," says Uhlfelder. "We are a much more fit, fast team than last year and our midfielders set that tempo. Our style will revolve around their speed and the opportunities that they create for our team in terms of fighting for loose balls, chasing people down, bring the ball up field and setting the pace. Since it is said that the game is won between the 30's, the midfielders have the opportunity to set the tone."

Attack

Veteran attacker Daphne Patterson will pace the Cardinal offense in 2007, as the junior boasts more scoring experience than any player on the squad. In her first two years on the Farm, the New York, NY native scored 62 goals and added 10 assists. Last year, she was the team's second-leading scorer, racking up 41 goals. One of the top offensive players in the conference, Patterson brings valuable consistency, having scored in 17 of 18 matches last season. The junior also brings the ability to step up in big games, as shown in the team's NCAA debut last season when Patterson netted the team's first three goals.

"Daphne is definitely a competitor and we can rely on her experience, consistency and ability to be mentally tough each game," says Uhlfelder. "She's a smart player who can pick up on the tempo of a game and know if it needs to be slowed down or kicked up. Daphne is a person who really likes to handle the ball, and puts her heart into every game."

The Cardinal attack will likely be the most seasoned unit on the field in 2007, but will need to step up and fill vacancies left by two of last year's top scorers: Megan Burkner and Sarah Bach. Two veteran attackers, junior Megan McClain and senior Michelle DeChant, started all 18 games last year and combined for 42 points. Junior Anna Brown and sophomore Bis Fries will be looked upon to step up this season after seeing quality time on the field as reserves last year. Brown was the most accurate shooter on the Cardinal squad, sending eight of her 14 shots to the back of the net. Fries had a fast start to her rookie campaign, and scored five times in her first four collegiate matches. Four members of the top-notch freshman class will round out the Cardinal depth on the attacking end.

"I think our attackers bring out the best in each other," says Uhlfelder. "Their job is to be confident ball handlers, skilled shooters, and find many different ways to score. We also love the attacker who can chase the ball back down and win it back after a missed shot or turnover. We'll look to our attackers to start the press and create a few more possessions in a game. If we continue to learn and improve at the pace we've been keeping in the off-season, we'll be very competitive this year."

Uhlfelder and her squad have high hopes for the 2007 season, including reaching new milestones. The squad will look to be productive on offense, stingy on defense, and create more fast break opportunities. The challenge to peak at the right time and get into a competitive zone has the 2007 squad ready to go.

"You've got to love a team that loves competition," says Uhlfelder. "You've got to love a team that is excited for each season and enjoys being with each other. You've got to love a team that celebrates when somebody does something good, and is there for somebody when they stumble. We've been ready to go since we ended our First Round NCAA Tournament game last year, and we're still ready to go. Add 11 new faces to that enthusiasm and this team is excited for the season, but they're also smart enough to know that they need to take one challenge at a time."

Senior Liz Piselli will co-captain the team in 2007.

All-American Laura Shane will continue to tend goal for the Cardinal in 2007.

Stanford claimed its second straight MPSF Conference title in 2006.

Michele Uhlfelder

Stanford Women's Lacrosse Head Coach

Maryland alum and former U.S. National Team member Michele Uhlfelder enters her seventh season at the helm of the Stanford women's lacrosse program. The transition that has taken place since her arrival on The Farm in 2000 has been an impressive one. In her first season as head coach, her team of virtual unknowns became the first west coast program to crack the top-20. Since then, she has gone on to recruit some of the best players and assistant coaches in the country, consistently build schedules of top competition and put Stanford on the map of women's lacrosse powerhouses. Her players have become the first in the west to be selected to All-Region teams, All-American teams and the U.S. National Team program. In 2006, Uhlfelder and her Cardinal made history, becoming the first program from west of the Mississippi to earn a bid to the NCAA Tournament.

After her inaugural 2001 team tasted national recognition, the string of national honors began. In 2003, the team finished the season at No. 15, marking the first time that a west coast program finished in the top 20 and was considered by the NCAA selection committee. In 2004, the team popped into the preseason poll at No. 14 and, in 2005, the team finished the season at No. 18. In 2006, Stanford topped a top-10 team for the first time in school history, produced its first two All-Americans, earned a No. 15 national ranking and became the first west coast team to break into the NCAA Tournament field.

Most notably, Uhlfelder is credited with exponentially increasing the program's strength of schedule, one of the key components used in NCAA tournament selection.

"Before I was hired, I believed Stanford was a program that could go deep in the NCAA Tournament," stated Uhlfelder. "Building the strength of schedule is crucial to preparing the team for the tournament, and beating the top teams is what gets you the invitation."

Each year since 2002 the Cardinal has played a schedule in which at least half of their non-conference opponents have gone on to earn an NCAA bid. In 2006, the Cardinal faced seven teams ranked in the preseason top-25, and three of the NCAA Final Four participants.

IN CONFERENCE

Uhlfelder's team has won 41 of its last 43 conference games (.953) and captured five league titles. In 2005 and 2006, her team took home a pair of conference championships and produced 10 All-Conference athletes. Uhlfelder was honored as the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation (MPSF) Coach of the Year in 2004 and 2005, the only coach to earn back-to-back honors since the league's inception. Entering the 2007 campaign, Uhlfelder boasts a 72-36 (.667) career coaching record.

Uhlfelder's vision has been instrumental in helping the conference grow from its roots in the Western Women's Lacrosse League, into the Mountain Pacific Lacrosse League, and finally into the NCAA-recognized MPSF Conference. During that time, the league has grown in size and strength.

"Conference teams' strength of schedule has significantly increased over the last few years," stated Uhlfelder. "Oregon added, and while we are in line to be the next conference granted an automatic bid to the tournament, our schedules have to be tough, in order to get there as independents. As a result, our conference is power-ranked higher than quite a few conferences already receiving automatic tournament bids. This is great for the future of our league."

INSIDE STANFORD LACROSSE

When Uhlfelder was hired, the program shifted goals from being the best in the west, to competing for the national spotlight.

"From the beginning, I have felt like we hit the pavement running," said Uhlfelder. "We have always had our eyes set on being a tournament team. We have wanted to play the toughest schedule possible, to recruit globally, promote the growth of lacrosse regionally, and provide the best possible academic and athletic environment."

Uhlfelder is passionate about the Stanford experience and eager to share it with prospects.

"Words that describe our program are ambitious, committed, visionary, pioneering, bi-coastal," she said. "The opportunities here at Stanford are becoming well-understood. First, Stanford's location is one of its major strengths. If you miss looking at the opportunity to live and grow in this environment for four years, you've missed a big chunk of Stanford. Secondly, the opportunity to balance a big-time athletic environment with a worldwide academic reputation makes Stanford the best undergraduate experience in America."

For Uhlfelder, her staff, and players the opportunity to come west embodies a pioneer spirit that shines through in recruiting and scheduling.

"Right away, we were going head-to-head in recruiting with some of the most established and successful teams in the country. Also, we were attracting attention from our opponents because of the school and program's growing reputation. This has led us into some match-ups with big-name opponents, which is great for the game."

It didn't take her or others long to realize that Stanford has a very special package to offer.

"Our players have the opportunity to build a nationally-prominent program and a chance to have an early leadership role, at one of the most visible, academically challenging, beautiful, and athletically dominant universities in the country. With this package comes the opportunity to impact the growth of the sport and by teaching, marketing and promoting the game here," commented Uhlfelder.

In hiring Uhlfelder, Stanford got an ambassador of the sport as well as a national caliber player. Her involvement with the national governing body for lacrosse began in the early 90's. She was one of the last members to serve in the capacity of Vice President of the United States Women's Lacrosse Association (USWLA), before the USWLA merged with U.S. Lacrosse to form a unified national governing body. When she arrived on the Farm, she was one of a select few individuals who represented U.S. Lacrosse as both a board member and a member of its U.S. National Team.

"At Stanford, I have the opportunity to weave together three important things to me: how much I care about our sport's growth, how much I desire to raise the bar and how much I want people to have the opportunity to see and play lacrosse," Uhlfelder said.

PLAYING AND COACHING CAREER

Uhlfelder came to the Stanford program in 2000 as a USA National Team player and a two-time member of the US World Cup Team. Since making the U.S. Squad in 1990 as a junior at the University of Maryland, Uhlfelder's playing career at the national level has spanned 15 years. In the 2001 World Cup, she was the third-highest scorer on the gold medal winning American team, ranking sixth among all scorers at the World Cup, and contributing two goals in the 14-8 win over Australia in the title game. Her first World Cup appearance came in 1997 (Tokyo, Japan) when the U.S. won the gold and she earned Player-of-the-Match honors versus Canada. Other international competition includes her selection to the 1996 and 2000 "A" Tours to Great Britain and Australia, respectively.

Prior to 2001 World Cup and coming to Stanford, Uhlfelder's coaching experience was earned as an assistant coach in Division I for seven years. She was a first assistant at Duke University from 1998-2000, and at Old Dominion University from 1994-1998. During her time at Duke, she coached six All-Americans and made a Final Four appearance. During her time at Old Dominion, she coached under national team coach, Sue Stahl, when the program won its first Colonial Athletic Conference (CAA) championship.

Uhlfelder's college playing days were with the Terps, where she was a starter from 1987-1991 at the University of Maryland. She helped lead Maryland to National Runner-up finishes in 1990 and 1991 and was selected to the NCAA All-Tournament Team twice. She served as a captain her senior year, and in the same year was chosen as the 1991 National Offensive Player of the Year and First Team All-America.

"I have been extremely fortunate in my opportunities. To have been a player and a coach concurrently at the highest levels fosters a unique involvement with the game," said Uhlfelder.

"I have always tried to keep my eyes wide open and learn from the many opportunities that I've been in as a player and coach. I've played with incredibly talented teammates, and coached with people who have been considered the top in our field. Each opportunity has given me the experience necessary to lead a staff, a team, and a program with very ambitious goals."

OUTSIDE EVENTS AND COMMUNITY

Uhlfelder has been responsible for promoting the growth of women's lacrosse nationally throughout her career. Her camps have quadrupled in attendance since her arrival on the Farm, and she was responsible for launching the Cardinal Elite club team. Both of these programs are outlets for her desire to teach lacrosse skills, strategy and technique, as well as raise the athleticism and level of player in the country.

Uhlfelder started the deBeer East/West Challenge in 2001 as a promotional event to showcase the game and bring in top opponents. Each year the goal has been to break attendance records with 1,000 fans. Beside the East/West Challenge, Uhlfelder has committed the programs resources to hosting the Sling It! Western States Tournament, where 50 teams come to Stanford to compete in April.

In 2002, Uhlfelder was responsible for bringing the Cardinal's equipment sponsor, deBeer, on board, in an effort to provide the team with some of the most innovative equipment on the market, as well as promote the company's desire to expand westward.

"deBeer came along at the right time, and presented us with a package that provided support for our goals and initiatives, and a belief in our program. There are many similarities between our program and their company- basically they came out of nowhere and became a prominent leader in the market. We share those ambitious goals," said Uhlfelder.

Uhlfelder's involvement with the game outside of Stanford includes membership on the Tewaaron Trophy selection committee, presentations at the US Lacrosse Convention and coaching at Division I Lacrosse Camp. She has worked numerous camps and clinics throughout the world, and has enjoyed involvement in the Positive Coaching Alliance during the height of its growth. She has extended herself to the Intercollegiate Women's Lacrosse Coach's Association (IWLCA) first as a South Regional Advisory Committee, and now simultaneously as a member of the South's All-American Committee and the IWLCA Rules committee. In the summer of 2003, she served as a selector for the U-19 World Cup team.

PERSONAL

Uhlfelder's vision and mark on the game, as a coach and player, earned her a pair of prestigious personal accolades following the 2004 season, receiving US Lacrosse's Beth Allen Award and being named as a Distinguished Alumnus of Pikesville High School. Uhlfelder was voted by a group of US coaches and former award winners as the recipient of the Allen Award, which is presented annually to a member of US Lacrosse Women's Division who participates in the National Championship Division A at the National Tournament. Uhlfelder became the award's first recipient from the Pacific Region, and the only winner to represent the West in the history of the award. In November 2004, she was named as the Distinguished Alumnus of the Year at her alma mater in Pikesville, Maryland, becoming the awards' 14th recipient among world-wide political figures, doctors, artists, and athletes including former pro Stanford tennis standout, Elise Bergin.

In addition to the Distinguished Alumni Award, Uhlfelder's hometown of Baltimore, Md. bestowed further honors on her, as she was selected to the eighth class of inductees in the Baltimore Chapter of US Lacrosse's Hall of Fame. The memorable class included two of Uhlfelder's US teammates, Erin Brown and Sue Heether.

Uhlfelder, 37, earned a master's degree in Physical Therapy from Old Dominion University. She currently resides in Menlo Park.

Randall Goldsborough

Stanford Women's Lacrosse Assistant Coach

Randall Goldsborough, a 1997 graduate of the University of Maryland, joins the Cardinal women's lacrosse staff for the 2006-07 season. In her first year on the Farm, she will take on the role of recruiting coordinator, and be primarily involved with the midfield and attack units.

"Randall's skill set as a player and a coach are fantastic," Head Coach Michele Uhlfelder said. "She is a great addition to our staff. Our players will benefit from her experience and knowledge of the game. Also, I am very excited to have each recruit, parent, campus administrator, camper and club player interact with her because I think she will be a great representative of Stanford lacrosse and the university as a whole."

Goldsborough brings a wealth of playing and coaching experience to the Farm, as a US National Team member, a Division I and III head coach, and a three-time NCAA Champion. A native of Annapolis, Md., Goldsborough attended St. Mary's High School and was named the 1993 Female Athlete of the Year by the Baltimore Sun and the Annapolis Sun. Her career continued at the University of Maryland, where she was a four-year starter and a member of Maryland's back-to-back National Championship teams in 1995 and 1996. In 1997, Goldsborough was an assistant coach for the Terrapins, when they won their third-straight National Championship.

An active participant in national coaching camps and clinics since 1993, Goldsborough has also been heavily involved in lacrosse at the international level. She had been a member of the US National Team since 1994, playing alongside Coach Uhlfelder as a teammate for close to ten years. She played on the United States Touring Team in Australia during the summer of 2000, and represented the United States as a member of the 2001 US Women's Lacrosse World Cup Championship Team. In seven games during the 2001 World Cup, she scored eight goals and posted three assists, including the eventual game-winning goal in a 14-8 win over Australia to capture the gold medal. Goldsborough was also a key player for the US in 2005, when the team took home the silver medal in Annapolis, Md.

"Randall is an extremely crafty midfielder attacker, with exceptional stick work and deception," said Uhlfelder. "I admire her game and have respected her as a teammate. She has an incredible amount to offer our players on and off the field."

Goldsborough comes to Stanford from The Bullis School in Potomac, Md. where she has served as the Girls' Athletic Director, Health Department Chair, Varsity Lacrosse Coach and a PE teacher since 2004.

Prior to her work at The Bullis School, Goldsborough spent seven seasons coaching at the collegiate level. After helping lead Maryland to a third-straight national title, Goldsborough moved on to the University of North Carolina, where as an assistant coach she helped the Tar Heels to an NCAA Final Four appearance.

After a one-year coaching stint at her former high school, Goldsborough was named to her first collegiate head coaching position. For three seasons, Goldsborough helmed the Division III program at Franklin and Marshall College and led her team to top-15 national rankings in each season. Additionally, she consistently coached players to regional and national All-America status. She accumulated a 26-22 record with the Diplomats and led her team to two-straight Centennial Conference Final Four appearances. In 2002, Goldsborough became the head women's lacrosse coach at Bucknell University, where she led the Bison to a 16-15 record. In her first year as head coach, she led her team to the Patriot League Final and posted an 8-8 overall record. In 2004, her team reached the Patriot League Semifinals and posted just the fourth winning season in the 27-year history of the program.

Kylee (Reade) White

Stanford Women's Lacrosse Assistant Coach

Former Ohio State standout and Canadian National Team member Kylee (Reade) White returns for her third season as an assistant coach under Michele Uhlfelder. In her time at Stanford, she has helped lead the Cardinal to two-straight MPSF Championships and emerge as one of the top women's lacrosse programs in the nation. Last season, White helped Stanford become the first team from west of the Mississippi to earn a bid to the NCAA Tournament. In 2007, White will be primarily responsible for coaching the defense and midfield, and all facets of game management, home and away. She will also be heavily involved with the team's strength and conditioning program, tape exchange and hosted lacrosse events.

"Kylee brings to us a lot of experience from a diverse background," stated Uhlfelder. "We benefit from her international experience as a tough midfield competitor, as well as her background in ice hockey and box lacrosse."

White came to The Farm in 2004 following a stint as a lacrosse coach and an Assistant Instructor in Wellness at The Culver Academies in Culver, Indiana. While at Culver, her squads captured two Indiana state championships and posted an undefeated record against in-state competition. The London, Ontario native coached a High School All-American and a High School Academic All-American during her time at Culver. White also served as a health and physical education instructor and was instrumental in the planning and staging of the Indiana State Lacrosse Tournament as well as the Culver Invitational Tournament.

White brings a wealth of international experience to the Stanford staff, having played for her native Canada in two IFWLA World Cups. In 2001, she helped her team to a fourth place finish in High Wycombe, England. In the 2005 World Cup, in which her team finished fourth, she ranked in the top-five players for caused turnovers per game, and was nominated for the All-World Team. In the match with eventual World Champion Australia, White netted a goal for Canada with 19:30 remaining in the second half. In March, White was named to her first National Team coaching post, as an assistant for the Canadian U-19 team.

"Kylee is a very enthusiastic teacher," explained Uhlfelder. "She has the ability to analyze fundamentals, movement, and develop skills in players. Her success as a head coach at the high school level and her experience as a Canadian World Cup player are unique. We're excited about her knowledge and ability to break down aspects of the game with our players."

A four-year letter winner at Ohio State, White co-captained the 2002 Buckeye squad that posted an 11-5 mark and a second place finish in the American Lacrosse Conference. White was a four-time Ohio State Scholar-Athlete selection and was honored as an Academic All-Big Ten performer on three occasions. Her 28 caused turnovers during her junior season ranks 10th on the Buckeye's single-season chart. She is tied for sixth on the Ohio State career chart with 60 caused turnovers, and also ranks sixth on the career ground balls list with 123. White scored a career-high 15 goals as a freshman and was the lacrosse team representative to the Ohio State Student Athlete Advisory Board from 1998-2000. An ice hockey standout in addition to lacrosse, White was the co-captain of Ohio State's inaugural women's varsity ice hockey team from 1999-2000.

White has been extremely active on the camp circuit as well, having assisted on coaching staffs at camps hosted by Denison University, Michigan, Notre Dame, Ohio State, Vermont and Ohio University. She has also served as a guest coach at Cardinal Elite club practices. Currently, Kylee is an assistant director of Stanford Girls' Lacrosse Camps, as well as co-director of the Western States Lacrosse Tournament, a 50-team tournament hosted by Stanford every year.

White and her husband Todd were married in August in London, Ontario. The couple resides in Palo Alto.

Adam Norton

Stanford Women's Lacrosse Volunteer Assistant Coach

Adam Norton joins the Stanford lacrosse staff for his first season as a Volunteer Assistant Coach in 2006-07. Norton brings a wealth of knowledge to the Farm as a goalkeeping coach, and will lend his energies to film analysis, and other various projects including helping to host tournaments, camps, and clinics.

"Adam is very passionate about the game of lacrosse, especially the position of goalkeeper," said Head Coach Michele Uhlfelder. "While goalkeeping will be his main area of responsibility, I am also excited for him to share his knowledge of shooting and finishing with our attackers. He is a good teacher and has a lot of respect for the women's game. He knows and studies the game of lacrosse on a lot of levels, and I am excited to have his 'crease out' perspective. He has already worked on a couple projects and will be an excellent logistics person. No doubt, he will help us grow the game by hosting tournaments and other quality competitive opportunities for young players."

A four-year starting goalkeeper at Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa., Norton comes to Stanford with a wealth of playing experience. At Dickinson, Norton captained the team and was named Most Valuable Player as a senior in 1997. As a junior, he held the top single-game Division III save mark and set a Centennial Conference record for single-game goals allowed the following season. Norton has also been active on the club lacrosse scene since 1991 as both a player and coach.

The Washington, D.C. native boasts a significant coaching background as well, having worked at various camps and clinics around the country. He served as an assistant coach at Catholic University from 1998-99 and has served as an assistant for a number of high school programs. Most recently, Norton served as an assistant for the girls' varsity at the Bullis School and as an assistant at St. Andrew's Episcopal. Norton was also a selector for the 2006 National Tournament and the Under Armour Girls All-Star Team.

Norton is currently the Owner/Director of the Core 4 Goalie School, originated in Washington D.C. His company has specialized in individual and small group goalkeeper coaching. He resides in Redwood City.

CHOOSING STANFORD

Bis Fries, sophomore – “At Stanford, the environment was different than any of the other schools I visited. Everyone works hard and is very goal-oriented, which helps keep me focused. Also, this kind of setting allows for maximum growth as a student, athlete, and person in general, and I knew it would make my college experience the best it could be.”

Eleanor Foote, freshman – “Coming from the east coast, I looked at a lot of great schools closer to home but ultimately choose to challenge myself by going to college in an entirely new part of the country. While at first this change seemed daunting, I am already so thankful for how much I have gained from this new experience and perspective.”

Vicki Fanslow, sophomore – “The endless opportunities combined with the great people... Whether you want to be a lacrosse player, a scientist, an actor, a backpacker, a pilot, an engineer, a writer or anything you could imagine, Stanford has opportunities to exceed in just about everything. To top this, you are surrounded by intelligent, fun and supportive individuals, whether professors or peers, that are enthusiastic and interesting in every way.”

Bry Gilkinson, senior – “When I stepped onto its campus, people were smiling, the sun was shining, and the beauty of the campus was overwhelming. The lacrosse team welcomed me as if I was already on the team, and I never felt out of place. The campus atmosphere was extremely inclusive and I immediately knew that this was going to be my new home.”

Katharine Fox, junior – “I chose Stanford because as soon as I set foot on campus I felt this unbelievable energy and spirit. Honestly the weather also played a huge factor too—70 and sunny in February is not too shabby. Finally I knew that going so far from home would allow me the opportunity to grow and learn in ways that I could not if I stayed close to home.”

Lauren Schmidt, freshman – “I was sold as soon as I came to the campus. Everyone seemed to be really happy and enjoying life. The idea of coming the west coast and experiencing something most people don't have the chance to experience was really enticing. There really aren't a lot of opportunities to try something different, and I really wanted to make the most out of my college career. I'm reminded I made the right choice every day.”

Melissa Vogelsong, sophomore – “I liked how Stanford seemed very focused on undergraduates, encouraging research and other opportunities to gain exposure to various fields, even early on. And of course, coming from upstate New York, the weather was an added bonus. But besides everything they tell you in the Stanford brochures, the biggest reason was the people here. On all my visits and in my experience so far, everyone seems genuinely happy to be here. I am academically challenged, there is no kind of cut-throat atmosphere (even in my pre-med classes); most people are just excited to be here and always seem to be willing to help each other out.”

THE PEOPLE AT STANFORD

Bry Gilkinson, senior – “I am continually surprised by the secret accomplishments of my friends. Most people at Stanford are extremely modest, and every few weeks I find out about another amazing thing that has been done by someone who I consider to be one of my closest friends.”

Dana Lindsay, freshman – “There is a unique respect among students at Stanford. Whether you're a musician, an artist or an athlete, your peers acknowledge and celebrate the time and energy you dedicate to your talents and interests. I never expected to find such kind and genuine people at Stanford. The people who make up this university have far exceeded all of my expectations.”

Megan McClain, junior – “The people here are one of the biggest assets of the school and definitely what I value most. There is an incredible collection of accomplished individuals here, but together we form an environment that is happy, hard-working, honest, and humble.”

Lauren Schmidt, freshman – “As great as the classes and academic aspects of Stanford are, I value the people the most, mainly the team. Being on the team is like having another family; my teammates are there whenever I need them. The atmosphere of the school is also unbelievable—there is no cut-throat competitive aspect in school work and students are so excited and willing to help out everyone else.”

Bri Ned, junior – “When strolling through campus during the day, you're likely to run into an Olympian or a Nobel Prize winner. Despite the accomplishments of people at Stanford, they are all still genuine down-to-earth individuals.”

Vicki Fanslow, sophomore – “Professors really care about undergraduates. They not only have office hours but practically beg you to come and ask questions. Professors want undergrads in their labs and part of their research as well. Professors like this are a rare commodity.”

Julie Christy, freshman – “Everyone I meet is so interesting. Each person has their own story and experiences that make them who they are now. No one judges anyone else based on first appearances. People take a general interest in you as an individual. My professors are eager to get to know their students, especially in a personal manner as well.”

Rachel Dyke, senior – “My education at Stanford has taught me the value of a diverse setting. I have been exposed to an incredible group of people who have engaged me in critical thought, hard work, and fun. I will leave Stanford a more informed and more open-minded person.”

Eleanor Foote, freshman – “I love being at school where people love to be at school- not only are people proud to go to Stanford but genuinely interested in learning and getting to know people. You come back from break and everyone is so excited to be back and to see each other. I know that doesn't happen everywhere; it's that positive enthusiasm and excitement that carries over to all parts of life at Stanford and makes it a fun environment to work and live in.”

Bess Siegfried, sophomore – “The coaches and teachers and administration here genuinely care about us, and being in a place where I can trust and feel safe and cared for is very important to the quality of every day life.”

NCAA'S

Bis Fries, sophomore – “When the name ‘Stanford’ came onto the TV screen as a team that would be in the NCAA tourney last year, that particular moment was honestly one of the best moments of my entire life. Our whole team was in a state of ultimate joy, and it was so awesome to be with everyone who you have worked so hard with for so long and get to be rewarded like that, not to mention to become a part of history.”

Bri Ned, sophomore – “As we left on the bus to our first NCAA appearance, I will never forget how many people from the athletic department were there to send us off. Everyone knew about us making the tournament and I was overwhelmed with congratulations the entire week. It's always nice to have your hard work acknowledged by others.”

Liz Piselli, senior – “It is maturity that teaches you that as an athlete you are doing other things that a normal student will never be able to do. As a lacrosse program we have made history by being the first west coast team to break into the NCAA tournament. Most students are unable to make history.”

Laura Shane, junior – “None are so memorable as the moment the name ‘Stanford’ popped up during the 2006 NCAA selection show. I have literally never seen so much energy in one place at one time—I don't think anybody even saw which team we were playing. For twenty-some people to have that dream finally become a reality is something I'll never forget.”

HIGHLIGHTS

Michelle DeChant, senior – “Highlights from my three years at Stanford include: hanging out with my friends, exploring Northern California, using the amazing resources at Stanford, and getting to experience the amazing weather.”

Melissa Vogelsong, sophomore – “Outside of lacrosse, other highlights include exposure to new things that I never expected coming into school. For example, I never imagined I would be watching a live kidney donor transplant (through the Organ Donor Education Transplant Shadowing Program) or examining cadavers (through an autopsy Introductory Seminar) during my freshman year. The number of unique opportunities that seem to exist is almost overwhelming.”

Leigh Lucas, freshman – “Some of the highlights just in the first half of my freshman year have been: making incredible friends, playing high-level lacrosse, being in the classroom with bright students, getting to know some really dedicated professors, being a member of a team, seeing shows on campus, hearing speakers, having some really interesting classes, and looking forward to the three and a half years still ahead of me!”

Katharine Fox, junior – “It often feels like a continuous highlight reel. Making the NCAA tournament was clearly a huge highlight especially because the support we received from the student body and other athletes was amazing. To see the crowd of coaches, some of the most revered in the country, standing on the hill to send of us to the tournament was one the greatest moments I’ve experienced—to see that our success mattered so much to them and that they were so excited for us.

I’ve also had numerous academic highlights—or what I call “so this is why you go to Stanford moments.” This year alone, in my African American history class, I sat next to the man who was Martin Luther King’s lead attorney and wrote portions of the “I Have a Dream Speech,” and I am being taught by the man who was handpicked by Coretta Scott King to receive all of her husband’s papers. To have resources like that is unbelievable.

Even my freshman year when I sent the dean of the med school an email asking for a response and he wrote back more than I could have hoped for. I have come across some of the most amazing people and have made the greatest friends of my life here.

Dana Lindsay, freshman – “My highlights at Stanford so far have been doing things that initially don’t even seem possible. Whether it’s completing a run when I don’t think I can go any further, or writing a paper on a topic that completely intimidates me at first, at Stanford I am pushed everyday. I get the opportunity to set extremely challenging goals for myself and later I get the chance to experience the pride that comes with doing something you initially weren’t sure you could do.”

Laura Shane, junior – “My super cool roommate Daphne Patterson and the D9, the awesome people, our team chemistry, surfing and Tahoe and the beach, Palm Drive, our warm-up mix, the grass on Maloney Field, random dance parties, the machine shop, lacrosse season promotion videos, Sophomore College...”

WEARING THE STANFORD UNIFORM

Laura Shane, junior – “Wearing the Stanford uniform is a huge honor. It means that you will never settle for “good enough.” Everyday at Stanford you are surrounded by incredible people—teammates, other athletes, and classmates—who push you to work harder and achieve more. If you wear the Stanford uniform it is your responsibility to yourself, your teammates, and to everybody who contributed to you being here to leave everything on the field everyday.”

Anna Brown, junior – “When I wear that Stanford Uniform, I reflect back on all the hard work that I endured to make my dream a reality. I remember the hard school work senior year to get my grades up for admissions and all the lacrosse camps I attended over the summer while my friends were laying by the pool.”

Rachel Dyke, senior – “It is an honor to wear the Stanford uniform. I am extremely proud to be part of Stanford’s athletic program and a member of our team. The Stanford lacrosse uniform shares the University’s legacy of greatness and carries the unique privilege and responsibility of establishing west coast lacrosse.”

Dana Lindsay, freshman – “I’ll never forget how proud and excited I felt as I walked out to the field with the team during our fall ball trip to Brown. I didn’t even realize how much I was smiling until I looked next to me and saw one of my fellow freshman also beaming from ear to ear.”

Michelle DeChant, senior – “Wearing the Stanford uniform means that you are part of a legacy—of Stanford University, of the athletic department, of your team (past, present and future), and of the other girls who have already worn your jersey and who will wear your jersey in the future.”

Bess Siegfried, sophomore – “I love traveling in our Stanford gear and having strangers ask me about Stanford Athletics and what being a student-athlete here is all about. I am so proud representing a place that has already enriched my life in ways I could not have prepared for.”

Maris Perlman, sophomore – “Stanford obviously has an incredible reputation for athletics. Athletes and coaches put their hearts into their sports, but the rest of the student body and staff are so supportive of our endeavors. Every time I put on the Stanford uniform, I feel as though everything I have worked hard for has purpose—I am no longer only playing for myself or for my team, but for the parents, fans, and school that supports me.”

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE AT STANFORD

Bry Gilkinson, senior – “It’s ironic that when I was in high school I thought that getting into a good university would feel like the culmination of something because, as soon as I got here, Stanford made me realize that it is just the beginning.”

Michelle DeChant, senior – “Stanford has taught me to ask questions and how to fight to learn the answers.”

Claire Hubbard, freshman – “In only a few months, Stanford has strengthened me as a person. I have been challenged more in my first quarter at Stanford, than I have ever been challenged in my life. I have become independent and much more confident in myself, because of Stanford. I have grown and changed more in my first quarter at Stanford than I did in all of high school.”

Eleanor Foote, freshman – “No one at Stanford can be underestimated as everyone has something to offer and add to the community. I love just walking (or biking) around campus and thinking about all the fascinating discussions, debates or even inventions taking place inside the buildings I pass. Yet not only does Stanford have a strong intellectual environment but also a strong sense of school spirit that positively pervades campus life.”

Amanda Schwab, freshman – “During new student orientation the dean came on the stage and told the entire freshman class that we will never be the same person our parents left the previous day. I, of course, did not believe one word that he was saying. There was no way that I was going to change at all—I never change. However, despite my disbelief in his words, I have in fact changed. I have matured and come into my own and it has only been 3 months. Although living on your own is frightening at first, it came as a surprise to me how easy the adjustment became and how willing I was to accept the changes that were occurring in my own life. Stanford has allowed me to branch out in ways I did not even think were possible. Stanford will give you the tools, it is up to you to wade through the opportunities.”

Liz Piselli, senior – “My perception of the world has changed since going to Stanford. I understand the perspectives of others a lot more. Being with people from a million different backgrounds at any given time has really been more educational than anything that I could have taken away from the classroom.

To learn how to thrive in an environment where I was not the brightest, nor the most talented, was a great challenge and I am a better person for having done that.

Coming into Stanford, I thought that all of the students would be obsessed with academics, studying all the time, and intimidating with their knowledge. What I learned, however, was that every student has their strengths and weaknesses and no one excels in all areas. As a result, students rely on each other and really value the opinions of fellow students. I also learned that Stanford students definitely know how to have a good time, and their lives (thankfully) don’t revolve around the next math test.”

Claire Hubbard, freshman – “The professors at Stanford are very important people in the world. I expected it to be impossible to relate to them in class and down right terrifying to approach a professor outside of class. Yet, the professors here very friendly and truly concerned and interested in their students.

Outsiders see Stanford as this prestigious school, where all the students think they are smarter and better than everyone else. However, the students I have met at Stanford are some of the most down-to-earth people I have ever met. Everyone shows other students a great deal of respect, whether they attend Stanford or not.”

Amanda Schwab, freshman – “Is it really nerdy? Do you ever go out? Is it fun at all? I understand why people may ask these questions... Stanford is an incredibly prestigious school with an innumerable amount of brilliant minds. However, Stanford is a melting pot of people, where no matter who you are or what you’ve done, no one is better than the next person. Everyone is appreciated for what they can bring to the table; everyone has something incredible to offer. That is what Stanford is truly about, oh, and it is, of course, EXTREMELY FUN!!!”

Liz Piselli, senior – “At Stanford you are surrounded by thousands of amazing people, who are down to earth, and have all worked incredibly hard to get here. Nothing is more humbling than finding out months later that your project partner won an Olympic medal or is an acclaimed musician.”

Bri Ned, junior – “To be quite honest, Stanford has far exceeded my expectations. Coming in, I was VERY nervous about the academics, but as I spent more time at Stanford, I realized that professors here want you to do well and they are willing to work with you until you understand. I will never forget the first day of my Intro to Humanities class freshman year when my professor called all student-athletes up to the front of the classroom after lecture. Once we had all gathered around he told us that we was so glad to have us in his class and that he wanted all of our athletic schedules as soon as possible. He told us that he admired our skill, hard work, and dedication. He said that Stanford student-athletes have a great tradition of excellence and he had no doubts that we would continue this tradition.”

A Look Back at the 2006 Cardinal Lacrosse Campaign

The 2006 season saw a long list of historical firsts for the Stanford women's lacrosse program, but the year will forever be remembered for one particular accomplishment. For the first time in the 25 years of the NCAA Women's Lacrosse Championships, a program hailing from west of the Mississippi broke into the 16-team field. A group of 28 players, led by head coach Michele Uhlfelder and her staff, charted new territory for the program and the sport alike. In doing so, they etched their names in the history books as pioneers of women's lacrosse.

Since coming to Stanford in 2001, Uhlfelder has worked to build a program with NCAA Tournament credentials. For 2006, she lined up yet another one of the toughest schedules in the nation. Seven Cardinal opponents were ranked in the preseason top-20, and three were coming off of successful runs in the 2005 NCAA Tournament. Three foes hailed from the competitive Ivy League and, for the first time in school history, the defending national champion was on the Cardinal agenda.

Stanford was up to the challenge.

In the season-opener, the Cardinal, which had finished 2005 on a 7-game run, picked up where it had left off and downed the Oregon Ducks in a 19-8 rout at Maloney Field. Senior Megan Burkner netted the 100th goal of her career midway through the second half, becoming just the sixth player in Cardinal history to reach the notable mark. Eleven players contributed to the Cardinal scoring effort, goalkeeper Laura Shane racked up 15 saves and the road looked smooth for the 2006 squad.

A week later, however, the team was handed a humbling loss, as Bay Area rival California pulled a shocking upset over the No. 20 Cardinal. The 9-6 defeat ended a 30-game regular-season conference winning streak and marked just the second conference loss of Uhlfelder's Stanford career. But the Cardinal was not deterred by the early setback. Rather, the loss fueled what would become the most successful season in Cardinal history.

On February 24, Stanford, while clinging to a No. 20 national ranking, pounded Ohio State, 17-9, behind career-high scoring performances from Burkner and junior attacker Michelle DeChant. Two days later, Stanford battled Notre Dame, a squad that eventually reached the 2006 NCAA Final Four, but fell in a double-overtime heartbreaker, 12-11, after holding a four-goal halftime advantage. The books recorded a loss, but the Cardinal squad knew what it was capable of, having held one of the best teams in the country without a lead for 67 minutes. At the end of the weekend, junior Liz Piselli was named the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation Player of the Week for the first time in her career, after registering a hat trick in each match.

Stanford rebounded from the trying loss with a three-game home winning streak. On March 5, senior Sarah Bach recorded a hat trick in each half and led the squad to victory over then-No. 12 Vanderbilt (15-9). The six goals were a career-high and matched a Stanford single-game scoring record. For her efforts, Bach was named the MPSF Player of the Week for the third time in her career and received Inside Lacrosse Player of the Week Honorable Mention. A week later, the Cardinal topped Columbia for the first time in school history (13-4), before routing Saint Mary's for the 17th straight time (18-7).

After a week off, Stanford faced a three-game stretch which included the eventual NCAA Tournament finalists, Northwestern and Dartmouth, as well as fifth-ranked North Carolina. The Cardinal dropped a home match to the Wildcats, 19-8, before falling 13-9 on the campus of the Big Green. Against North Carolina, Stanford struggled in the first half and trailed 11-2 by halftime.

Things were about to change.

With 30 minutes left to play, Stanford began a turnaround, holding the No. 5 Tar Heels to one second half goal, while netting three of its own. Shane broke a Stanford single-game record with 22 saves. Although the effort was not enough to upend the Tar Heels, Stanford had begun a powerful rally.

On April 10, the Cardinal returned home to blast UC Davis, 20-6, in the team's highest scoring affair of the season. The next week, Stanford halted Denver's 11-game win streak (11-9) and pulled into a tie for first place in the conference. Piselli scored four times in the second half, and was named the MPSF Player of the Week for the second time. The streak continued the following week, as sophomore Anna Brown netted a game-winner to lift the Cardinal over Loyola on the road (13-12). In the final weekend of regular season play, Stanford claimed its first-ever victory over Connecticut, 10-7, for its fourth consecutive win.

On April 30, in the final match of the regular-season, the Cardinal got a chance to attract some national attention. The squad was up against No. 10 Cornell, a team that had claimed the Ivy League regular-season title just 48 hours earlier. Stanford seized the opportunity and edged the Big Red 5-4. The momentous win marked the program's first-ever victory over a top-10 team and drew the late-season attention that the Cardinal needed. After two key saves in the final minutes, Shane was named the MPSF Co-Player of the Week and garnered Inside Lacrosse Player of the Week Honorable Mention. Uhlfelder joined an elite group of division I coaches as the U.S. Lacrosse Coach of the Week.

Stanford entered the MPSF Tournament in a must-win situation, needing to dominate the field in order to remain in contention for an NCAA berth. The squad stepped up to the challenge, blowing by two conference challengers in less than 24 hours. Stanford first avenged the early season loss to Cal, handling the Bears 17-9, before soundly defeating the top-seeded Denver Pioneers, 12-6. Bach joined Burker in the 100-goal club in the first half of the tournament final, with an early free position goal. The MPSF title was the Cardinal's second-straight and extended the team's winning streak to 7 games, matching the second-longest single-season streak in program history. Burker was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, while Bach, sophomore Bri Ned, and sophomore Daphne Patterson were named to the All-Tournament Team. With 11 points in two days, Burker became just the second Cardinal player in history to be named the Inside Lacrosse Player of the Week. Stanford soared to No. 15 in the polls and awaited the announcement of the NCAA Tournament field.

With only eight at-large bids and a long list of deserving bubble teams, Stanford's fate was uncertain. But on May 8, as the bracket was announced live on CSTV, an eruption of cheers from the Kissick Auditorium on the Stanford campus confirmed an unprecedented accomplishment. The Stanford Cardinal had earned a ticket to the ultimate destination in college women's lacrosse: the NCAA Championships. The map of women's lacrosse powerhouses suddenly spanned coast to coast and Stanford, California became an official destination. The western-most division I women's lacrosse program had finally done it. The squad headed to Evanston, Ill., looking to dethrone the top-ranked Northwestern Wildcats in the first round.

Stanford fought to the final horn, but the eventual national champion claimed the first round victory, 17-9. Despite the loss, the team had much to be proud of. The Cardinal outscored the Wildcats 4-1 in the final minutes of the game and stole nine second half draw controls. With just 13 seconds remaining in her career, Burker reeled in a pass from Piselli and netted a long-range shot to break the Cardinal career scoring record with 143 goals. Stanford ended the memorable season with a 12-6 overall record, a 6-1 mark against MPSF opponents, an MPSF Championship trophy, a No. 15 national ranking and a slice of history.

Six seniors finished successful Cardinal careers at the NCAA Tournament. In addition to finishing as the Cardinal's all-time leading scorer, Burker concluded her career second in career assists (64), draw controls (120), shots (328), free position shots (63) and ground balls (155). She also finished tied for eighth on the career chart in caused turnovers (51). She remains one of only three players in Cardinal history to appear on every career statistical chart. Bach also finished an impressive career with the Cardinal. The attacker stands fifth in all-time scoring (104), third in career assists (52), sixth in shots (221), fifth in free position shots (48), seventh in ground balls (118) and seventh in draw controls (50). Defenders Thea Lorentzen, Kinsey Morrison and Nyerr Parham combined for 100 career caused turnovers and 180 career ground balls. Goalkeeper Kate Horowitz finished her career with 50 saves and a .505 career save percentage.

As a team, Stanford posted nationally ranked numbers in four categories. The squad's 2.61 goal scoring margin was 18th best in the NCAA, as was its .667 win percentage. Stanford also ranked in the top-25 nationally in scoring offense (19th) and scoring defense (22nd). Responsible for more than a quarter of draw controls won for the Cardinal, Burker consistently ranked in the top-20 nationally in the category and finished the season ranked 18th with 2.83 draw controls per game.

Shane finished the season with the third-best save percentage in the nation (.556) and stood as the only division I goalkeeper to register multiple 20+ save performances. Her 22 saves against North Carolina on April 2 tied for the top mark in the NCAA in 2006. The sophomore also ranked in the top-50 nationally in ground balls per game and was one of 21 players and three goalkeepers named as nominees for the Tewaaron Trophy. She finished the season with 205 saves, the second-highest single-season mark in Cardinal history. The Baltimore, Md. native also notched 105 saves against ranked teams in 2006. Just halfway through her career, Shane is within 50 saves of a Cardinal career record.

Post-season honors poured in for the Stanford players. Burker, Shane, Ned and Piselli were named to the 2006 All-MPSF Team. Burker and Shane became the first Stanford players to be named to an IWLCA All-Regional First Team, before becoming the first All-Americans in program history.

The 2006 Stanford women's lacrosse campaign officially ended on May 14, but the Cardinal is far from finished with what was started in 2006. In Uhlfelder's first year as head coach, the Cardinal cracked the top-20. In 2006, they toppled a top-10 team and became the first program in the west to break into the NCAA Tournament field. The next step? A deeper run into the tournament and chance to become the first west coast national champion.

With 20 team members eligible to return and ten talented newcomers on their way west, Stanford is up to the task.

In 2006, Stanford made the NCAA tournament and became the first West Coast team to break into the 16-team field.

Bryanne Gilkinson received the 2006 Jim Muhlfelder Memorial Award, created by Stanford Lacrosse to recognize the player who most represents the values of former deBeer president, Jim Muhlfelder. He believed in: being down to earth; approachable; respectful of teammates; and respectful of the ups and downs of the game. The award recognizes the player who displays fire and desire, while also giving back in service to her team and program.

Many Cardinal players and coaches have consistently represented their national team programs. Current head coach Michele Uhlfelder is a two-time member of the US World Cup Team, and was the third-leading scorer for the US squad that took home the gold medal in 2001. Assistant coach Randall Goldsborough played alongside Uhlfelder as a member of the 2001 US World Cup Team and netted the eventual game-winner in a 14-8 win over Australia to capture the gold medal. Goldsborough was also a key player for the US in the 2005 World Cup. Assistant coach Kylee White is a member of the Canadian National Team, and also competed at the 2001 and 2005 IFWLA World Cups. She is currently an assistant coach for the Canadian U-19 National Team.

This summer, junior Laura Shane and Megan Burker '06 were named to the US Elite and Developmental Teams, respectively. Shane was the youngest player on the Elite Team roster and one of only five current collegiate players. Burker was one of 11 returning players on the 2006-07 Developmental Team roster. Senior Bryanne Gilkinson, a native of Mississauga, Ontario, was a member of the Canadian U-19 National Team in 2003, and helped her team to a bronze medal. In 1999, Kelsey Twist '05 competed on the US U-19 Team that captured the gold medal in Perth, Australia.

Other U.S. National Team players with Stanford ties include: Sarah Hughes (Assistant Coach 2005-06), Jo Connelly (Assistant Coach 2003-04) and Quinn Carney (Assistant Coach 2002-04).

STANFORD ALL-AMERICANS

The list of firsts accomplished by the 2006 Stanford women's lacrosse team continued to grow on May 30, as two Cardinal standouts became the first players in program history to receive IWLCA/US Lacrosse All-America honors. Goalkeeper Laura Shane was named a Second Team All-American and attacker Megan Burker was named a Third Team All-American, as announced by the Intercollegiate Women's Lacrosse Coaches Association.

In addition to being the first Stanford players to earn a spot on one of the IWLCA/USL All-America teams, Shane and Burker shared the honor of being the first players from a west coast squad and the first to represent the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation. The pair also earned All-Regional First Team honors for the first time in school history.

"I am extremely proud to see Megan and Laura earn All-America honors, and be recognized among the nation's top players," said head coach Michele Uhlfelder. "Each in her own right has made special contributions to our season and our program, and now I can say, the game of lacrosse. They are the first west coast players to earn the distinction of All-America, and I couldn't be more excited for them."

Both players were honored by the IWLCA and US Lacrosse at the annual awards banquet on June 10 in Baltimore.
